THE WORK FOR REPUBLICANS TO DO.

One of the greatest speeches delivered so far during the campaign, was that delivered before the New York Republican Convention, at Saratoga, last week, by Senator Conkling. The Senator is a great orator. His eloquence is not surpassed by that of any man in the nation, and his political standing places him in the foremost rank of our great leaders. The New York Herald says that he is almost the only statesman of our period who has acquired such a command over public attention that his utterances are deemed of sufficient interest to be fully reported by the press. We do not admire his school of politics, that is, we do not believe in the principle of one man, or a few men, controlling the appointments for the great State of New York, but we do acknowledge Senator Conkling's almost matchless powers, and admire his consummate political skill; and above these, we land his earnest Republicanism. His strength and powerful oratory, made the New York Republican Convention a historical gathering. The Democracy expected a wrangle between the Conkling and the Curtis factions, but to their utter astonishment and discomfort, the Saratoga Convention was one of the most dignified, courteous, and harmonious political gatherings ever held in the State of New York. The great speech of Conkling's which electrified the entire body, and the brilliant effort of George William Curtis, created a condition of things in that convention which was never before witnessed in a political assembly.

Mr. Conkling's speech was upon the vital issues in the campaign. He pointed out the work for the Republican party to do, and showed the danger of placing the control of the Government in the hands of the Democratic party. To show the force of his position he stated some facts for consideration, one of which was that in the county in which Charleston, South Carolina, is located, there is a Republican majority of eight thousand, and yet at an election not long ago for members of the Legislature, no candidates were nominated and no Republican votes were cast! Assassination strikes down blameless men and helpless women in Mississippi, and there is no one to punish, and yet this is done in a great Republic, and in the last quarter of the nineteenth century! Mr. Conkling then showed what the party had done, and what there was for it still to do, and in closing he said: "The mission of the Republican party is not ended. It has done much. It has put down a vast rebellion, freed 4,000,000 slaves, made a free constitution, united the fragments of a shattered empire, managed war and finances to the amazement of mankind; it has carried railways over deserts and mountains to the Pacific Sea; it has made harbors, built breakwaters and lighthouses, and established life-saving stations on perilous coasts; it has stretched out a network of signal service to give warning of storms on land and sea; it has cheapened foreign and domestic postage, founded a postal money order system, put post offices on wheels, and doubled the cheapness and swiftness of transmitting intelligence; it has secured to every man who will have it a homestead of 160 acres of fertile land; it has stood for free speech, free labor and free men always; it has upheld the public credit, and its aims have been those of humanity and right. Like every human agency, it has, no doubt, sometimes fallen into error; but its record is filled with great and useful achievements. Not only do urgent works and duties remain for the future, but work and duty which summon us all to concord, harmony and earnestness. Putting away side issues and all bickerings and strife, the plain duty of every sincere Republican is to stand for the Republic. Let all men, of whatever party, see the dangers around and before us, and make common, wholehearted cause to avert them. Let our motto be: 'In essentials, unite; in non-essentials, liberty; in all things, charity.'"

The Democrats in the Second District, like their friends in the Third, agree that they stand only third best in the political fight, and can not hope to win.

Butler Opens a Bar!

From the New York Tribune.

Butler has rolled his barrel of money into Boston Common and knocked out the head and told the boys to come and help themselves. His expenses so far are reported to have been $30,000, and assurances are given that he will spend ten times that sum rather than be defeated. A Boston paper has this apt remark: "It will strike thoughtful voters that it is not a promising outlook for a reform candidate to pay the railroad fare and hotel bills of delegates to nominate him and to hire men to become enthusiastic in his behalf." If the Statesman of Granbury Park will watch the Massachusetts canvass closely he may obtain a few points for use in 1880.

It is a little singular that while a great cry is made in the United States about hard times, poor workmen, and that sort of thing, the people of Canada envy our position and condition, and are flocking to the States by the tens of thousands. By the way of Fort Snare alone 30,610 people have sought homes in the States this year, of whom 16,183 people were from the Province of Ontario and Quebec. These people have come in with horses and

CONGRESSMAN WILLIAMS WILL SPEAK AT RACINE TOMORROW EVENING.

So far the public meetings which Mr. Williams has addressed—Clinton, Evansville, and Milton—have been very largely attended. He gives the people Republican principles unadorned, and being backed up by facts and armed with a vigorous mind, solid argument, and commanding language, he is able to carry convictions, and thus do the cause of honest money, and freedom of the ballot, South as well as North, valuable service. Doubtless should improve the opportunity of hearing Mr. Williams at Racine, and thus find out how he stands on the financial question. It will save the Judge some letter-writing.

It is very evident that all the Greenbackers are not joining the new movement, for the purpose of securing currency reform. The later Ocean calls attention to the fact that Greenbury L. Ford, of the Eighth District, who has been renominated for Congress, is opposed by the Nationals, and yet Colonel Ford is a Greenbacker himself! He is a strong man politically, a sound Republican, and entertains moderate Greenback views, and is the author of the bill which passed the last session of Congress prohibiting the further retirement of Greenbacks; and notwithstanding his services for the Greenback movement, there is no man more bitterly assailed by the Greenbackers than Colonel Ford. This is pretty good evidence that the Nationals are not sincere in their Greenback profession.

The President's private Secretary, Mr. Rogers, has publicly denied the statement that while on the recent trip of the President to Minnesota and Wisconsin, there were occurrences of such a disagreeable character on the part of General Le Duc, Commissioner of Agriculture, who accompanied him, that the President wished him to leave the party. It would not be strange if Le Duc did make himself disagreeable. His very appearance, his pomposity, the style he put on at Madison, seemed to express the words—"Here's a bigger man than Hayes." Had he been as meek as his bearing as the President of the United States, he would have gained some friends.

It is quite significant that in the Third Congressional District, the Democracy talk of abandoning the field. The Derlington Republican says: "Judge Cothren has been here twice during the past week, in consultation with his political friends, and it is announced that he has finally determined not to be a candidate for Congress. With its vacillating policy on the currency question the Democratic party is rapidly going to pieces; and it is more than probable that Democracy has made its last fight in a congressional canvass in this district."

The Milwaukee Sentinel on the Doolittle-Parker platform: "The letter and the reply remind one of one kind of school teaching. The simple minded pedagogue asks his pupil: 'Do you not think the proper way to spell cat is c-a-t?' 'Yeth thir,' responds the pupil, and he is given a little erom for proficiency in spelling. When Mr. Parker read the first question he didn't know whether he was in favor of State banks or not, but the beginning of the second, 'if you are not,' gave him his answer—and so on through the list."

When the legal tender act was taken before the Supreme Court for the purpose of testing its constitutionality, five Republican Judges stood in favor of the greenback, and four Democratic Judges stood opposed to the greenback as a legal tender. By this strict party vote in the highest Court in the nation, the great question was decided, and if the majority of the Judges had been Democrats, the greenback as a legal tender would long ago have been thrown out of existence.

Mr. Parker does not attempt to define his position at the meetings he and his hired man Stewart are holding in the District, for the reason that he is not capable of doing so. If a man like Parker cannot stand before fifty or a hundred farmers and in plain language explain his financial views, what sort of a career would he make in the Congress of the United States?

Peck's Sun asks, "If these Greenbackers want fiat money, why don't they buy up a lot of the old Confederate money? They might try that and see how it would work. A pile of it as big as a haycock wouldn't buy a green cranberry."

The Democrats in the Second District, like their friends in the Third, agree that they stand only third best in the political fight, and can not hope to win.

Talk about distress and discontent, the people of the States don't know anything about it, when compared with the experience of our Canadian neighbors.

PUT TO A TEST.

How a Farmer Put the Doolittle-Parker Scheme to a Practical Test—The Greenbacker Wouldn't Take His Own Medicine.

Chicago Times.

CLINTON, Wis., Sept. 28—I am an old farmer, and don't much about politics or financial matters, but I do know that I have several notes to pay this fall, and, as my crops were poor and prices low, I have been puzzling my brains to find some means of raising the money to pay them. But the other day I read ex-Senator Doolittle's letter to Mr. Parker, and his reply, and the idea struck me that I had at last found an easy way out of my difficulties. Among my liabilities is a note due the reaper company of which Mr. Parker is the senior partner; so I called on Mr. Parker and told him I had come to pay my note. The note was procured, the interest figured up, and then I handed Mr. Parker another piece of paper. He adjusted his eye-glasses, scrutinized the document, and wanted to know what it was. I informed him that it was one of my certificates, which I proposed to issue in exchange for my notes, to "save paying the interest and the ultimate payment of the principal." To my great surprise, Mr. Parker refused to accept it. He said it was worthless; that it was a fraud, and ridiculed the idea of my trying to pay my debts with paper that contained no promise to pay anything at any time, bearing no interest, and, in fact, promising nothing, and not worth the paper they were written on. I am beginning to lose faith in the Doolittle-Parker scheme of paying debts, and I am afraid I shall have to pay in good, honest money according to contract; and I think, perhaps, on the whole, that's the best way, not only for individuals but also for the government.

SORROWFUL.

A Sorrowful Week for the Sickly South—Increase of Fever at All River Points.

MEMPHIS, TENN., Sept. 29—The week closing has been a most sorrowful one. Death has claimed many of our most prominent citizens and the grim monster still continues his ravages with unabated fury. The Board of Health report thirty-two deaths from yellow fever having occurred within the past twenty-four hours ending at 6 o'clock to night. John G. Lonsdale, Sr., Treasurer of the Howard Association, is dying.

ENVIRONED WITH DANGER.

The dweller or temporary sojourner in a malarious region of country is environed with danger. Besides inhaling at every breath an atmosphere saturated with an infectious poison, he also drinks water which is in most instances likewise impregnated with the fever and ague breeding miasmata. A bilious subject, deficient in stamina, or irregular in habit of body or digestion, his peril is much increased, as these abnormal conditions are extremely favorable to the contraction of malarial disease. But this danger may be safely encountered with the assistance of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which completely neutralizes the atmospheric virus, and neutralizes the constituents of miasma tainted water. This benign antidote to disease eradicates and prevents fevers of an intermittent and bilious recurrent type, besides effecting a thorough and permanent reform of those enfeebled or irregular conditions of the system which invite not only malaria, but other diseases equally to be dreaded.

The deceased was a native of New York, and was in his 60th year. He was a prominent Odd Fellow, and, at the time of his death, was returning from Baltimore, where he had been in attendance upon the United States Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows. He was also a member of the State Assembly of 1877, and the Senate of 1879, 1880, and 1881. The remains will be brought here for interment. WISCONSIN.

Rublee Confident of a Republican Success this Fall.

MADISON, Wis., Sept. 29.—The Hon. Horace Rublee, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, in conversation with your representative to-night expressed great confidence in the success of the Republican cause in the State this fall. Arrangements have been made, and are making, to have probably some of the best speakers in the State to speak at points named. Senator Windom, of Minnesota, expressed a willingness to make several speeches in the State. Congressman Dunnell, of Minnesota, will also be invited, and it is earnestly hoped he will accept the invitation. Mr. Dunnell is one of the most eloquent orators of the Northwest, and will present the doctrine of sound money in a convincing and forcible manner. Mr. Caswell's chances of election as Congressman in this district grow brighter every day. Many Democrats are disgusted at the shilly-shally course of their party, and openly assert their determination to vote the Republican ticket. The success of the Dane County Republican ticket is assured beyond a doubt.

It is Reported That He Will Enter the Canvass as a Greenbacker.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 29.—The friends of ex-Senator Carpenter are claiming that he has been a consistent advocate of the Greenback doctrine. They say he intends to go into the canvass arguing in favor of a bill for the repeal of the Resumption act, and in behalf of the continued circulation of greenbacks. Wherever he is charged with repudiating the financial principle of the Republican party, it is said will produce his record in the United States Senate, which will show that he has always been an avowed Greenbacker.

BRIEFLETS.

—A rainy Sunday.
—Thirty days hath September.
—October will be here at 12 o'clock to-night.

—Robert McKee and family, of Boscon, spent Sunday in the city.
—The Guards meet for drill to-night at 7:30 o'clock. The armory will be open at 7 o'clock.

—Mrs. Parker, who lives in the Second ward, celebrated her eightieth birthday yesterday.
—King receives the Sunday papers from Chicago early every Monday morning. That's business.

—The Council meet again to-night. The Water-Works Committee are expected to render their report.

—This evening at the Congregational church will be held the annual rental of pews for the coming year.

—Ed. J. McKee, of McKee Bros. returned from the East on Saturday, and lots of new goods for the firm are arriving daily.

—The lightning was playing about yesterday afternoon. That's a bad example for the boys who are taught that they must not play on Sundays.

—To-morrow the cow ordinance goes into effect. The pound is ready to receive its victims, and the wise ones will do well to shut up their milkers.

—The different Boards of Registry will meet at the polling places, on the several wards, according to law, one week from to-morrow, to make a preliminary register of the voters.

—Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cairns desire to express through the columns of the Gazette, their sincere thanks for the kindly sympathy and friendly acts of which they have been the recipients during their affliction.

—E. R. Buckridge, of Beloit, and Miss Lockapple, of "everywhere," walked at Rockford Saturday for a purse of $20, the distance being ten miles. Buckridge won by 4 laps, his time being 1 hour and 32 minutes.

—The Wisconsin Methodist Conference meets in Fort Atkinson to-morrow, and will continue in session for about a week. Bishop Foster, who has been presiding at the West Wisconsin Conference in Monroe, will occupy the chair.

—The funeral of Mrs. Barrere took place at the Trinity Episcopal church yesterday afternoon, the services being conducted in accordance with the impressive ritual of that church. There was a numerous gathering of sympathizing friends.

—The Delavan Republican announces that H. A. Smith, of this city, was hunting for a store to rent in that place, with a view of opening a boot and shoe stock there. Smith says it's a deliberate lie, and he ought to know. He is satisfied to remain in Janesville.

—McClellan & Co. are receiving a large stock of new goods to meet the demands of their rapidly increasing trade. The stock embraces a large variety of new and choice goods, which should be looked over by all interested in dry goods. McClellan & Co. are determined to keep to the front both in stock and in low prices.

—A paragraph has been going the rounds to the effect that Rev. T. F. Sawin, pastor of the Congregational church of this city, has accepted a call from a church in Lyndebor, N. H. As there is not the least shadow of truth in the item, its origin is as mysterious as the fact that it could receive any credit. Rev. Mr. Sawin is not on the move, and his people here are determined that he shall not be very soon.

—Miss Minnie Holdridge will start to-morrow for the East, and will soon return upon her second season in Boston, where she will be joined by Miss Guernsey who will start a day or so later. The young ladies will conclude their course in elocution by next spring. Both show a marked liking for this branch of study, and are already well-skilled in elocution, and with another year's drill will without doubt more than meet the great expectations of their many friends and admirers.

—From Rev. Mr. Chapell's sermon last evening, it was learned that a century and a half ago, before a man could enter into marriage it was necessary for him to become a church communicant. For refusing thus to receive a young man into his church, Jonathan Edwards was deposed from his pastorate and sent west among the Indians. The penalty was entirely incommensurate with the gravity of the offense for a more heartless proceeding could scarcely be conceived than that of depriving a man, who was about to launch his frail bark among the pitfalls and waterfalls of matrimony of the consolation of religion.

—Mrs. W. B. Britton was not as seriously hurt by the runaway Saturday afternoon as was supposed at the time. (She was badly stunned by the being thrown from the buggy, and for a time lay unconscious, but no bones were broken and she is now able to be about as usual though somewhat sore. It appears that the horse became frightened at some boys dancing about a bonfire on Academy street. The horse turned suddenly tipping over the buggy and throwing Mrs. Britton out. The horse then started for the barn, but was still further frightened by men rushing into the road and trying to stop him. He then turned again, and before he was stopped made a sad wreck of the buggy.

THE WEATHER.

The thermometer at 7 o'clock this morning stood at 65 degrees above and at 2 o'clock at 82 degrees above. Cloudy.

The indications are, to-day for the Tennessee and Ohio valley lake region, upper Mississippi and lower Missouri valleys, southeast winds, falling barometer, warmer, partly cloudy weather, followed in the lower Missouri valley by cooler westerly winds and rising barometer.

MRS. SCOFIELD'S FUNERAL.

The funeral services of Mrs. Daniel Scofield, took place yesterday afternoon. Rev. Mr. Chapell officiated, and made a few remarks on the incompleteness of human life.

man life. Mrs. Wingate, Mrs. C. B. Conrad, Messrs. D. D. Bennett and L. D. St. John rendered appropriate music. Messrs. William Payne, R. Wiggins, J. B. Rowley, J. C. Fredendall, J. B. Crosby, and G. H. Williston served as pallbearers. The services were very impressive, and were attended by numerous sympathizing friends.

MR. CLITHERO'S FAREWELL.

The three years pastorate of Rev. Thomas Clithero drew to a close yesterday, in accordance with the limitation established by the Methodists. Mr. Clithero has worked quietly but earnestly, and the church under his charge has grown steadily and surely. There are many both inside and outside of the church who will part with him with regret, and whose best wishes will follow him to whatever field of labor he may be sent. Yesterday morning he preached his farewell sermon. He said his feelings were a mingling of pleasure and regret. Everything that was unpleasant should be forgotten at such a time, and only good remembered. The very word "farewell" was a benediction meaning "fare thee well," and in fact all languages the words of parting implied a well-wish and a blessing. The struggles and trials of the past three years were not to be underestimated. There had been some storms, some heavy blows, some of the strong ones had been taken away, and yet there was the bright side also. The church had "breathed" in almost every respect. The benevolent collections had been doubled. The number of subscribers to denominational periodicals had been quadrupled. The membership was larger, though many had changed their church relationship to other places. There was reason to be thankful too, for the energy and activity manifested in the church. As in all flocks, there were some black sheep, but yet the church showed a strong spirituality as a whole. All that was unpleasant should be forgotten and the halo of Christ's glory should crown everything. There had been some losses by death, but in every instance the life of the departed had been such as to fully warrant all the words uttered over their remains. Among these were J. L. Kimball, G. L. Knox, Nathaniel Thompson, A. A. Clark, Mr. Rice, Mrs. Elvira Hall, Catharine Doty, Abigail Thompson, and Mrs. C. D. Hendrickson.

Mr. Clithero having made these preliminary remarks said he could do no more than to give them the benediction uttered by Paul to the Galatians, "Brethren, the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit." The apostle at the close of each of his epistles had added such words as these. They evidently meant much. In modern times this benediction had been adopted as the closing of every Evangelical worship. In these words were folded all the fears and hopes of the future. The full force of Paul's words could only be detected by examining the history of the Galatian church and its peculiarities. It became thus evident what were Paul's fears, and what were his hopes when he thus closed his letter to them.

The source of all blessings and all curses was Christ himself, and the dividing line between them was simply obedience to God's law. The loyalty to God brought the blessing, disloyalty brought the curse. The grace which he wished to have with them was the beauty of holiness.

The speaker presented some well-chosen thoughts drawn from this theme, and his last service as pastor of the First Methodist church was ended with the doxology and the benediction.

ST. MICHAEL'S AND ALL ANGELS' DAY.

The Rev. Mr. MacLean, rector of Trinity church, delivered a very interesting sermon yesterday, on the subject of death, his text being taken from 1 Cor. 15:54. After considering the subject of death, he said in substance: On this St. Michael's and All Angels' day, a day dear to Christian hearts, it is well to remember one other truth so often misunderstood and unconsciously mutilated. No Christian man or woman or child ought to be taught to believe that either will ever be an angel. The words of the beautiful little hymn—

"I want to be an Angel," are bad theology and bad religion. They are thoughtless words that do a great deal of harm. We do not want to be angels, or if we do, my friends, the desire is a wrong one, and you may be sure will never be realized.

Angels are distinct creatures from men. They are pure spirits. Men have bodies and always will have them beyond the skies. Angels and men will dwell together in happiness, but angels will never become men, nor men angels. Many of you may never have thought of this, but it is true, and the teaching of the New Testament and of Christ, and of the Christian church, confirms this statement. "When this corruptible shall have put on incorruption and this mortal shall have put on immortality," is spoken of a body. Now no angel has, or ever will have, a body; and we shall all rise with bodies purified. Christ himself shall show his wounded hands and feet. Besides, we are told that we are made so much better than the angels. It is a popular mistake which has crept into the popular religion, and embodies itself into popular hymns, that we are to be angels in heaven. We never shall be, and we ought never to want to be, the hymn to the contrary notwithstanding. We want to be purified men and women, bodies or disembodied spirits. The very name of the day testifies to the truth of what I am saying. It is the commemorative day of St. Michael and All Angels. All Saints' day is for the commemoration of men who now dwell in Paradise. All Angels' day is for angels.

DEATH IN THE CISTERN.

Just think of it! Thousands of gallons of dead, stagnant water drain daily in our cities—these without water works—water that tastes so strongly of corruption and decay to those accustomed to pure water, as to be intolerable. Debauched ladies who shrink from the sight of the least external impurity, drink and cook with the washings of their roofs, that has lain for months dark and foul. Some console themselves with a filter. Charcoal is a great purifier, but it is impossible to bring the water back to that state in which it fell, fresh from the clouds. An eminent physician and sanitarian says, "Water to be pure must be constantly and exhaustively purified and is only to be found in springs and wells whose supply is ever changing. Such is the only water that should be used even in cooking." Powder on the subject, dear reader, and let a word to the wise be sufficient. X. X.

CITY NOTICES.

You Never Heard a Dentist say that Sezzodon was not a good article to preserve the teeth and gums. This fact is not to be controverted. What gives it such prominence as a curative wash? It is compounded, after years of scientific plodding, of materials selected to harden the gums, remove the septic acid, and avoid putrefaction.

So all ladies say of Spelling's Glor. They use it to make Lovers stick.
